Software firms merge to offer users expanded resources in developing consignment, resale & retail solutions

Dubuque, Iowa - Tri-Technical Systems (Tri-Tech), a national leader in retail business software solutions, has recently merged with Computer Consultants Exchange (CCE), the software developer of one of the leading retail solutions for consignment and resale stores.

Headquartered in Dubuque, Tri-Tech has over 4,000 retail stores throughout the United States and Canada utilizing its cash register polling and point of sale software. CCE, based in Boulder, Colorado, is the developer of Consignment Ease (previously Best Consignment Software) and Consignment Success, industry recognized software applications for consignment and resale shops.

"Both companies have over 25 years of experience working in their respective industries, and developing and supporting software for those industries," said Paul Acton, President of Tri-Tech. "This merger will allow both companies to share their technology and draw upon the expertise developed over those years. We are pleased to welcome CCE and its valued customers to Tri-Tech."

"We are happy that we are able to partner with Tri-Tech to continue advancing the technology that is required with the ever-changing consignment environment. Tri-Tech has a reputation of providing superior products and technical support. Our customers are in good hands," says Tammy Ruddick, owner of CCE.

Tri-Tech is the author of the AIMsi and Active-e software products. AIMsi is a complete point of sale (POS), inventory management, accounting and business software application for retailers. AIMsi v10 is PA-DSS certified. The software offers businesses not only a way to control inventory, manage customers and track sales, but also offers fully integrated add-on modules, allowing retailers to build their own custom software solution.

Active-e is a web e-commerce solution that fully integrates with AIMsi. It includes shopping carts, business to business (B2B) product updating operations, customer to business (C2B) functions such as sales history, order status, open account payments, rental payments, reservations and much more.
